

It's Selfish To Be Poor In The Information Age

I ran across this great "meme" the other day ...
... and it really hit me like a ton of bricks.

It's absolutely SELFISH to be POOR ...

when all I have to do is apply myself online and find a legitimate way to generate an income!

What an epiphany, huh? ☐

Some may take great offense to this.

In fact, I did years ago because I heard this at a network marketing event because I was struggling.

I didn't have any answers at age 24 other than, "go get a higher paying job."

(That was in 1994. I didn't even have an America Online account yet! LOL)

However, when I was introduced to the wonderful world of network marketing, my mind became wide open to the ...

Possibilities!!!

It was only recently I ran across this concept and recalled I'd actually heard it 20 years ago! ☐

So let's dive in ...

If your "paycheck" is just paying for food and shelter, there's no room for economic advancement.

For being creative enough to innovate, tithe, give back, pay it forward, etc.

Which makes you a modern day slave.

Period.

For years, I was learning to be “creative” at how to live on less money (at times in my 20’s and 30’s).

I actually learned that mindset from being a “broke” college student. Like it was a badge of “courage.”

More like stupidity, right?

In the land of “opportunity.”

YOU BET IT IS!!!

The most SELFISH thing one can do is choose to remain broke.

Read that again.

==> The most SELFISH thing one can do is choose to remain broke.

That may come across as offensive to some.

Here’s the truth.

Getting YOUR bills, family, health, money, etc. handled ...

Allows to you commit more creative time and effort toward solving OTHER’S problems ...

And being of $ERVICE to society.

(You may want to let that sink in for a few minutes!)

I got so far off track at times.

Especially in my 20’s when I was “grinding” at low-paying jobs.

Fortunately, I found my way back.

By plugging into mentors having the RESULTS I wanted to have.

Who could “show me the way”
from Point A to Point B.

I say this often ...

EVERY ONE here on social media
(you included!) can solve his/her personal economic crises within 90 days if s/he’ll just stop playing games and learn how to be of $ervice and value via this incredible platform of social media!

So ... are you ready to give up economic slavery and choose economic freedom today?

Awesome!!

You’re already in the right place ...

- 1) You have access to the internet!
- 2) You’re able to read this article
- 3) Add desire and hustle ...

And you’re ready for success!!
